

Having studied and taught a variety of natural health modalities and therapies, Patricia Bowden-Luccardi has been a life-time student of integrative health and wellness.

For over 20 years she has been teaching and providing private consultations on health protocols customized to her clientele's personal needs.

During the past six years, Patricia has focused her expertise on the natural prevention of breast cancer. She is a professional advocate for the promotion of radiation-free thermography.

Her public seminars and lectures are designed to educate women about the serious health risks of environmental toxins and endocrinal disruptors. Her natural protocols including diet, supplementation and lifestyle changes have revealed extraordinary results that have been later visibly confirmed by thermographic imaging.

Patricia holds licensed certifications in Thermographic technology, Clinical Massage Therapy, Food as Medicine and Whole Health Education™ and lifestyle and wellness coaching.

Earlier, she was a Neuromuscular Therapist and Breath Educator at Canyon Ranch Medical Spa in Lenox, MA. Patricia has lectured widely to professionals in the medical field and the public.

Her speaking venues have included, but are not limited to, Beth Israel Medical Center and its Continuum Hospice Care facility, Canyon Ranch Medical Health Resort, Cornell University extension, Cavell Cancer Treatment Clinic, Breast Cancer Options, Albany Medical Center, Viacom-MTV Networks, and several leading New York City hospital clinics.
